

Dr. Joanna Karolina Malinowska
Epistemology and cognitive science research group

Course 2
Naturalistic epistemologies

Naturalism is currently one of the most popular paradigms in epistemology. Over the years, not only many varieties of epistemological naturalism have appeared, but also many critical voices against it has raised. The course is devoted to reconstruct and analyse the history of its development. We will talk about criticism formulated against this position as well as about many of its types. Finally, we will consider the biggest challenges and the important problems discussed within the naturalistic framework. By participating in the course, students will gain knowledge about the most current epistemological issues and attempts to solve them. Thus, they will be able to understand and participate in contemporary philosophical discussions regarding the theory of knowledge.